

Section 3

Poetic

Overview

Job was called a perfect and upright man who feared God and shunned evil. He did only that which he thought to be right, even trying to cover for the sins of his children. Satan appeared before Yahweh among the sons of God and Yahweh gave him permission to put Job through trials that included afflicting his family, his possessions, and then him personally. Even through his great trials, Job continued to trust in Yahweh as his redeemer. His friends sought to comfort him by suggesting that his afflictions came because of his sins. Job repented when he learned that the greatness of the wisdom and power of Yahweh was beyond his ability to question. Yahweh blessed him and restored to him more than he had lost.

Psalms is filled with spiritual songs given by the Spirit of Yahweh of His blessings, mercy, wisdom, and glory. He pronounces blessings for those that delight in His law and judgment for the ungodly. He knows the way of the righteous, but the way of the ungodly shall perish. He reveals His wisdom and faithfulness to those who trust in Him. He promises to deliver them from the trials that their enemies bring upon them. He says His words are pure and that they, along with His mercies, will endure forever. He tells us that Yah is our strength and our song and has become our salvation. Blessings come to us in the name of Yahweh, whose name alone is to be praised by everything that breathes.

Proverbs was written by Solomon, who was the son of David and the king of Israel. It gives instructions in wisdom, justice, judgment, and fairness. It gives subtlety to the simple and knowledge and discretion to the young. Those that are wise will not be wise in their own eyes but will receive their wisdom from Yahweh. Rather than leaning on their own understanding, they will allow Yahweh to direct their paths.